

guard of honor at Southeast Station in city after his arrival from Czechoslovakia.

smooth functioning of the two embassies regarding the intensification of a tougher direct-action program to advance communism in the world and the Soviet Army on the issue of atomic weapons.

Just an Escort, Kennedy Jokes As Wife's Charm Enchants Paris

TAYLOR C.I.A. REPORT IS EXPECTED IN WEEK

First Lady Wins Bouquets From Press — She Also Has Brief Chance to Visit Museum and Admire Manet

R. W. GRANGER BLAIR

PARIS. — Mrs. Kennedy was welcomed by a large crowd of Parisians, including some tourists, as she strolled through the Tuilleries Garden yesterday morning before the start of her husband's official visit to France. Mrs. Kennedy visited the Louvre, the French national art museum, yesterday afternoon, accompanied by André Malraux, French Minister of Culture. The First Lady was also invited to the opening of the First International Conference on Impressionism at the Musée du Luxembourg, where she was shown a painting by Claude Monet.

Greetings Not Ambitious
Mrs. Kennedy's visit to Paris is not expected to be as formal or as ambitious as that of President Kennedy, who is to arrive June 10. The First Lady will be accompanied by her husband's personal staff, including General Taylor, and Mrs. Kennedy's own personal staff.

Mr. Malraux, who has been working closely with Mrs. Kennedy since their first meeting in May, will be available to escort her throughout the visit. The First Lady will be accompanied by her husband's personal staff, including General Taylor, and Mrs. Kennedy's own personal staff.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

Mrs. Kennedy Arrived
The Second Lady arrived in Paris yesterday morning, June 2, at 8:30 A.M., after a short stopover in London. She was met at the airport by Mr. Malraux, who had arranged for her to be accompanied by General Taylor and Mrs. Kennedy's own personal staff.

After a brief stay in London, Mrs. Kennedy will travel to Paris, where she will be accompanied by General Taylor and Mrs. Kennedy's own personal staff.

Quick Trip to Museum
Mrs. Kennedy will be accompanied by General Taylor and Mrs. Kennedy's own personal staff.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

On her tour of the Louvre, Mrs. Kennedy was accompanied by M. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, director of the chateau and Mme. Maurice de Pierre-Schomberg, the French First Lady.

GUIDED TOUR: Mrs. Kennedy is shown through the Jeu de Paume Museum by André Malraux, French Minister of Culture. Museum has collection of Impressionist paintings.

Communiqué on Paris Talk

PAGE ONE — PARIS, June 2. — Mrs. Kennedy, in a statement to reporters here, said that the French government had invited her to Paris to help strengthen relations between the United States and France.

The First Lady said that the French government had invited her to Paris to help strengthen relations between the United States and France. She said that the French government had invited her to Paris to help strengthen relations between the United States and France.

The First Lady said that the French government had invited her to Paris to help strengthen relations between the United States and France. She said that the French government had invited her to Paris to help strengthen relations between the United States and France.

The First Lady said that the French government had invited her to Paris to help strengthen relations between the United States and France. She said that the French government had invited her to Paris to help strengthen relations between the United States and France.

The First Lady said that the French government had invited her to Paris to help strengthen relations between the United States and France. She said that the French government had invited her to Paris to help strengthen relations between the United States and France.

The First Lady said that the French government had invited her to Paris to help strengthen relations between the United States and France. She said that the French government had invited her to Paris to help strengthen relations between the United States and France.